Monday deaths are homicides: EPS

Not related, not random. Core still safe despite trio of deaths, police tell the public

Two deaths near Jasper Avenue Monday have been deemed homicides, but police are emphasizing they do not believe them to be random and that the downtown area is still safe.

Shane Kyle Bird, an 18-year-old man, was discovered in Oliver at 1 a.m. Monday severely injured from stab wounds. He was transported to hospital, but later pronounced dead. Police believe Bird and another man were involved in an altercation that quickly escalated.

"We've now identified a suspect. We are currently trying to locate that suspect," said Homicide Staff Sgt. Bill Clark, who declined to provide any further details during a media availability Tuesday.

Monday's second homicide victim and the city's 11th of the year was 68-year-old Jose Rodriguez, who was found in his apartment at 8328 Jasper Avenue shortly after 10:30 a.m. Police said that Rodriguez also died as a result of stab wounds.

These deaths come off the heels of another homicide just last Thursday. Curtis Raymond Dugray, 51, was found deceased in a park, also in the Oliver area. "There's no link between these deaths," said Clark. "These are individuals that are involved in high-risk lifestyles, and sometimes that leads to violent incidents that often end in death."

New police station opens in S.W. Edmonton

As of 8 a.m. Wednesday, the new Southwest Division police station will be fully operational and open to the public.

The new station, located at 1351 Windermere Way, replaces the 1976-built station at 9710-51 Ave.

"Members of Southwest Division are looking forward to moving to their new station and continuing to deliver high-quality policing services to the citizens of Southwest Edmonton," EPS Supt. Nigel Stevens said in a release.

Seasonal temperatures, precipitation expected this summer

After a long winter and slow spring, summer is upon Edmonton.

And the season will be "near seasonal or even slightly above seasonal" for both temperature and precipitation, according to Weather Network meteorologist Elena Lappo.

"The seasonal temperature average in June, July and August would be 21.5 C for the maximum and 8.5 C for the minimum for the City of Edmonton," Lappo said Tuesday. "And in terms of precipitation ... about 250 millimetres of rain is the average."

Last summer, Edmonton recorded 222 mm of rain, said Lappo. METRO

Businesses excited for electronic parking meters downtown

Pilot project. Calgary program to be used on Edmonton streets

RYAN TUMILTY
ryan.tumilty@metronews.ca

Businesses in downtown Edmonton can't wait for new electronic parking meters that have hit city streets for an upcoming pilot project.

The Park Plus meters are imports from Calgary, where they have been in use since 2007.

The meters in Calgary allow people to pay by debit and credit cards instead of change, and after people set up an account they can also use their cellphones to add time or get warnings if their time is about to expire.

Jim Taylor with the Downtown Business Association said he has high hopes the new technology will help address a long-standing problem in downtown Edmonton.

"In the 18 years that I have been around the Downtown Business Association, parking has always, always been an issue," he said.

Taylor said electronic meters are something the city has long needed.

"Any major city in Canada is certainly way ahead of us in Parking change

- In Calgary, the Park Plus program has 44,000 cell-phone accounts and there are 1,142 parking zones.
- The system allows drivers to refund time they don't use and, according to the Calgary Parking Authority, 77 per cent of users called for a refund in 2011, receiving a total of $3.5 million.

terms of technology."

He said in addition to freeing people from concerns about having the right change, the meters could allow more cars to park in an area because it won't be tied to a set number of meters.

Jeff Van Den Biggelaar, owner of the DeDutch restaurant on Jasper Avenue, said the change would be great for his business.

"I think it would be awesome," he said, adding he would prefer if his customers could sit and enjoy their meal and not have to worry about filling a meter.

The city has an official launch event planned for later this week and declined to comment on the meters or the pilot program until that time.

Province to open 24 new primary-care clinics

Alberta says it will roll out 24 new family care clinics starting this fall to help relieve pressure on overcrowded emergency wards.

"This is a new way of doing things, and I think that's pretty exciting," Premier Alison Redford announced Tuesday at an inner-city health centre. "This is something that is entirely different than what we're seeing anywhere else in the country."

Health Minister Fred Horne said the clinics will be one-stop locations for precautionary care. Patients will be able to see a pharmacist, a dietitian, a nurse and a doctor all in one visit.

Horne said one of three pilot family care clinics in Slave Lake, north of Edmonton, resulted in a 20 per cent drop in emergency-room visits.

"It will guide our evolving system to be an even more effective front door to health care for Albertans," said Horne, who was with Redford at the announcement.

The province has set aside

$50 million this year for the project, which was an election-campaign commitment made by Redford. The final goal is 140 clinics.

Liberal Leader Raj Sherman said the family-clinic model is effective, but not if Redford's government takes resources from other areas of health care.

"My concern is: are they cannibalizing the other end of the health system to pay for it?" Sherman asked.

"We need a massive investment in primary care, but not at the cost of severely underfunding home care, cutting palliative care in Calgary and closing transition units."

We're bad news for bears: Eco-group

Backcountry. Humans caused 14 grizzly deaths last year, say environmentalists

An environmental group is raising the alarm over the deaths of 15 grizzly bears in Alberta last year, saying too much human access to the backcountry is further threatening the already threatened iconic species.

Sean Nichols, a conservation specialist with the Alberta Wilderness Association, said all but one of the deaths can be attributed to human interaction — bears struck by vehicles on highways, shot in self-defence or killed illegally. Although 15 doesn't sound like a huge number, Nichols said the deaths have been adding up. The current grizzly population is estimated at about 700.

"This is far, far too many," Nichols said. "When you look at the last 10 years it's 195, and when you take almost 200 out of that 700, you're looking at more than a quarter of the bears in the province."

The Alberta government suspended the grizzly hunt in 2006 over fears of dwindling numbers and declared grizzlies a threatened species in 2010.

Nikki Booth, an official with Alberta Environment and Sustainable Resource Development, said the deaths are regrettable but should be put into perspective. "The human-caused grizzly bear mortalities in 2012 were actually the lowest we've seen since 2007, and overall the mortality rates appear to be stable."

Interceptor. Ford recall affects 25 EPS cars

A recall affecting almost 500,000 Ford vehicles will also mean a trip to the shop for 25 Edmonton Police Service rides.

The recall, issued Monday, affects the 2013 Ford Flex, Fusion, Taurus and Explorer models. The vehicles have a problem that can cause fuel leaks and potential fires, though no fires have been reported.

Modified versions of the Taurus and Explorer are sold to police agencies as the Ford Interceptor, which Edmonton police are currently testing as a possible replacement car.

"We have about 25 of those vehicles in the fleet and we are going to be dealing with that in the way that recalls are dealt with," police spokesperson Leila Daoud said Tuesday.

Daoud said that would mean taking the vehicles off the road in batches to be repaired at the dealership.

In the meantime, the force has a team of mechanics, and the problem that prompted the recall hasn't cropped up so far, said Daoud.

She added that the vehicles won't be pulled from service in the interim and it won't affect patrols.

"We will need to take time out to bring these vehicles into the dealership, but it won't affect policing," RYAN TUMILTY/METRO

Roberta Cowell

Race car driver, former Second World War pilot and father of two, Roberta Cowell, now 95, was born Robert Marshall Cowell.

Growing up with signs of hermaphroditism, Robert had feminine qualities such as wide hips, narrow shoulders and undeveloped but apparent breasts. "I had always known that my body had certain feminine characteristics," she wrote in an autobiography titled Roberta Cowell's Story (British Book Centre, Inc.) published in 1954.

Robert gained notoriety as the first known British transsexual woman to have sex reassignment surgery. Roberta was Robert until the age of 33 and then the transformation began.

We might be lucky to think that present-day society is accepting of all sexual identities. This hasn't always been so: "People are apt to hate as well as fear the unfamiliar," Cowell writes. PHOTO: HANDOUT

Justin Fashanu

The world's first professional soccer player to publicly come out as gay, Justin Fashanu's story turned tragic in 1998 when he committed suicide.

"You have to understand that footballers are very narrow-minded people," the former Norwich City forward said in one interview. "It's the nature of the business. When you put yourself in the firing line, you are open to attack. I know I'm there to be shot down in flames."

At the time of his death in May 1998, he was charged with sexual assault and the accuser was a 17-year-old boy from Maryland, U.S. In a suicide note, Fashanu said the sexual relations were consensual, and believed he wouldn't get a fair trial because of his homosexuality. Kwame Harris

Jamaican-born former NFL player Kwame Harris, 31, was publicly outed in January following a highly publicized fight and legal battle with his ex-boyfriend Dimitri Geier. The former offensive lineman played for the San Francisco 49ers and the Oakland Raiders for six seasons. Harris described his conflict over whether or not to come out while he was in the league as "turmoil" and "despair" and regretted his decision to keep his sexuality private during his time in the NFL. "I didn't see those two things as being compatible, but now when I look back in hindsight, I could have done it differently," Harris said in a CNN interview.

After publicly stating his sexual orientation, Harris received an outpouring of support from family members and former teammates. Had he done so while on the professional league, he would have been the first and only NFL player to come out as gay. PHOTO: GETTY IMAGES

Silver linings playbook: Will a day come when a player's sexuality won't get in the way of their game? ISTOCK

When basketball player Jason Collins came out early this year, he renewed the debate about whether openly gay players are welcome in the arena of professional sports. More than 45 years after Pierre Elliott Trudeau declared the state had no business in the bedrooms of the nation, 21 years after Canada allowed gays and lesbians to serve openly in our military, and more than a decade since same-sex marriage has been legal across the country, Canadians may think we'd finally be able to stamp "paid" to the gay/lesbian/queer rights debate.

Sadly, we have yet to smash a significant barrier — the right for Canada's LGBT community to play community-league sports without the fear of literal and metaphorical locker room lockouts.

Dave Doucette, 41, played hockey until he was 16. He vividly remembers hearing gay slurs, disparaging remarks about women and talk that made him feel like an outcast. "F—ing faggots" and similar comments came out in the

Add the usual team pack mentality, where aggression and adrenaline are considered performance enhancing "drugs" and it's easy to see how homophobia can run rampant.

Eric Demarbre, 34, admits he was one of the bullies, picking on others when he played high school hockey. Even though he knew he was gay, he "didn't show it," alluding to stereotypical gay male behaviours. While Demarbre victimized others, he too suffered. "I never felt any feeling worse in my life than that. Like go-home-and-cry bad," he explained. "You're pretending to be one of them, and you're debasing yourself in that process just so you can fit in."

The women in our group tell me the experience is different in women's sports. Their sexuality didn't keep them from playing the sports they love.

But they didn't get off scot-free either. "My team and I went to Montreal for a tournament and we stayed overnight," remembers Ana Oliveira, a 34-year-old soccer player from Brampton, Ont. "A couple of the girls said they didn't want

Alan Gendreau

Could he be the NFL's first openly gay player? He'll have to get drafted first, but Alan Gendreau, 23, is the first publicly gay athlete to enter the NFL draft.

Out since he was 16, Gendreau had supportive teammates both during his high school football years in Apopka, Fla., and in his college football years at Middle Tennessee State. But not everyone was accepting of his sexual orientation. Gendreau was asked to leave when he brought a boyfriend to a church event. "It was like my family telling me I wasn't allowed to come home," the devout Christian said in an interview with Outsports, a website that serves the community of gay athletes in sports. "I'm a kicker that happens to be gay," Gendreau said in an interview with the New York Times. "It's a part of who I am, and not everything I am. I just want to be known as a normal kicker."

Orlando Cruz

Ranked #4 featherweight by the World Boxing Organization, Orlando Cruz, 31, became the first active professional boxer to publicly come out on Oct. 4, 2012, declaring in a statement, "I have always been and always will be a proud gay man."

In an interview with The Associated Press, the former Olympic athlete for team Puerto Rico said, "I developed physically and mentally to take such a big step in my life and in my profession ... knowing that it would have pros and cons, highs and lows, in this sport that is so macho. I kept this hidden for many, many years."

Who's it gonna be?

"I actually think it's going to be a grassroots kid who changes the professional sports world. It's gonna be some kid who's just amazing at his sport and it'll be like, 'Oh, he's gay.' And then nobody's gonna be able to say anything about it."

not necessarily the case," says J.D. Muir, 29, who's played on men's hockey, rugby and football teams. Muir talks about how we define sports as a culture. "They're aggressive. They're war games," he explains. And the language used in sports, he says, includes homophobic slurs and pressure to be strong, powerful and non-submissive.

Strong role models can help. "You hear about kids being bullied and beat up and ostracized, so to have someone to look up to is really important," says Lela Kouyoumdjian, 38, who plays for the Toronto Soccer Association and Pink Turf soccer league.

Today, Jason Collins is the only major league athlete to come out while still in the game. "I think there's a lot of paving still to be done," Kouyoumdjian says. "When someone like Collins comes out, it's very courageous; it's very brave. And we need more people to do that."

We can all make a difference, however, and we can start by choosing our words with care. "It's words like lame and retarded and gay," says Doucette. We can work on "eradicating these words that people fluff off and don't consider as damaging — except by the people they're being thrown at."

athletes to keep competing. And if teachers, coaches, family and friends of the LGBT community work together, maybe there will come a time when an NBA player's public declaration of homosexuality won't be a big deal.

But according to this group, that time is not now.

"I'd like to believe that no one's going to care if every gay athlete came out, but that's to stay with me in the room because they didn't want me to touch them inappropriately. I said, 'Don't flatter yourself. You're not my type.'"

Oliveira, who was supported by friends, family, coaches and teachers since she came out as a lesbian at the age of 17, said the experience was unexpected. "I was surprised at the comment, but I didn't let it get to me," she said. "They're ignorant and it was my job to just stop it there." On the field, the incident was forgotten. "We played. We were focused. We just wanted to play," Oliveira said.

Receiving an unwanted sexual advance in the locker room is perhaps the greatest unspoken fear in mixed (gay and heterosexual) teams. "I'm pretty sure it's the only thing that that anyone's really worried about," Demarbre said.

But straight guys should stop worrying, says Doucette. "I play on an all-gay hockey team," he says. "We're in the showers with a bunch of gay guys and nothing's happening so..."

Only one of our group came out while playing on a mixed (queer and straight) sports team. What would it have taken for the others to do so? "A miracle!" says Doucette. "Because of everything that's being said in that room, there was no way I was going to ostracize myself."

Change is happening, though. There is support for the LGBT community with organizations like Outsport Toronto and programs like the You Can Play Project, encouraging LGBT

Sending out a message

As we celebrate Pride Week 2013, what's one message you'd like to share with the LGBT community?

- "Be proud of who you are as a person — your values, your sexual orientation, your beliefs, everything — just be proud of who you are and follow your heart."

Do you think sponsorship and endorsement opportunities would increase or decrease after coming out?

Unfortunately, I think they'd decrease. But I strongly hope and wish that at some point, it doesn't matter ... you get sponsorships for the person and the athlete that you are, regardless of your sexual orientation.

What was behind your decision to come out publicly?

To help people suffer less and give them strength.

When I was at Harvard University someone committed suicide, another person tried to, and I later heard that they were homosexuals. Something like that rings a bell in your head. If I can help people come out and be who they want to be — and be who they are — if I can save one or two lives, that goes a long way.

Have you ever experienced homophobia?

No, never. I've been really lucky. I don't think I allow people to be homophobes around me either, so...

How do you do that?

Stand up for yourself. Be proud of who you are. And know that you're not alone.

Did you have any lesbian role models in sports?

Not in sports, but in my family. Two uncles and one aunt are gay. Even in that generation, they always brought their significant others with them to Christmas parties. Ever since I was born they had the same partners and still do today ... my aunt is almost 70. They're not athletes, but they're amazing role models for me and for my family. My grandpa and grandma were really ahead of their time. I gave them a lot of credit. It had a really positive impact on me too. I never in my life felt bad for being gay.

Edmonton Pride festival set to Stand Proud

LGBTQ. Parade has changed from a protest to a celebration over the last 30 years, says event spokesperson

KRISTA SYLVESTER
For Metro Edmonton

After “standing up” and “standing out” it’s now time for Edmonton’s gay and lesbian community to Stand Proud.

The Stand Proud theme is the final theme of a three-year plan that saw the LGBTQ (lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans-identified and queer) community first Stand Up and Stand Out during the past two festivals, according to Edmonton Pride Festival spokesperson Terry Harris.

“It’s really the idea about encouraging people to stand up and support each other and recognize the work that has been done over the years to advance equal rights,” Harris says. “This year we wanted to stand proud and really look back at the history and recognize what has been accomplished.”

And a lot has changed, according to Harris, who says the parade itself has become less of a march for rights and more of a celebration.

Festival details

Edmonton’s Pride Festival kicks off on Friday June 7th until Sunday June 16th with the parade taking place on Saturday June 8. For more information please visit edmontonpride.ca.

“Back in the early ‘80s it was more of a pride rally or a protest to march for equal rights, but now it’s become a truly celebratory parade with pride for what we have achieved over the last 30 years. And the community has a lot to be proud of.”

The Edmonton Pride Festival has 36 events spanning the 10-day-festival with a variety of options to celebrate the diversity of the community. Harris says there are many different family and youth-oriented activities in addition to the dances and the parade festivities this year.

“It’s a time to celebrate and that’s really what the festival is about,” Harris says. “It’s about having the opportunity to celebrate the diversity of community and recognizing all of the hard work that’s been done. We really encourage the community to just come out and enjoy and we think we have something for everyone.”

With between 25,000 to 30,000 attendees at last year’s festival — which was a record attendance according to officials — this year is shaping up to be another well-attended festival with thousands of celebrators.

“Edmonton hosts one of the largest pride festivals in Canada,” Harris adds.

Marijuana in the U.S.

Possession arrests higher for blacks despite equal use

Black people are arrested for possessing marijuana at a higher rate than white people, even though marijuana use by both races is about the same, the American Civil Liberties Union reports in a new study.

The analysis of federal crime data, released Tuesday, found marijuana arrest rates for blacks were 3.73 times greater than those for whites nationally in 2010. In some counties, the arrest rate was 10 to 30 times greater.

The report comes as Colorado and Washington just legalized adult possession of small amounts of marijuana.

B.C. grow-op. Disguised bunker containing 430 plants, industrial generator linked to Hells Angels, police say

EMILY JACKSON
Metro in Vancouver

A sophisticated underground marijuana grow-op disguised as a Langley hobby farm — complete with three sheep, a pig and guarded by about a dozen pit bulls and Chihuahuas — was busted by police over the weekend.

RCMP needed a crane to excavate five steel shipping containers connected with a continuous underground pathway at the property in the 27000 block of 56th Avenue, according to a news release from B.C.'s Combined Forces Special Enforcement Unit.

Three men and one woman were arrested when investigators found 430 plants at the site, though they were later released pending further investigation. The dogs are being cared for by one of their family members.

"This had the potential to be extremely dangerous to the public and emergency responders," CFSEU-BC spokesman Sgt. Lindsey Houghton said in a statement.

Police believe the grow-op, described as a "complex operation that required a great deal of planning and equipment," including cranes and flatbed trucks, was running for at least a couple of years.

This is the second underground grow-op the CFSEU-BC has dismantled in the past two months. While police don't believe the Langley operation is connected to the Mission, B.C., operations disguised as horse paddocks they busted last month, they think both are linked to the Hells Angels.

Police allegedly found 120,000 erectile-dysfunction pills and capsules at the head offices of Elmaleh's businesses.

People who allegedly trafficked industrial quantities of illegal erectile-dysfunction pills into Canada are facing the prospect of jail time.

Two men are accused of bringing in hundreds of thousands of contraband pills made in China and selling them across Canada.

The Canada Border Services Agency says the illegal products were intended for sale on the Internet and in sex shops in different provinces.

Dozens of charges are being laid against Alain Elmaleh and Alain Richer, and against 12 businesses Elmaleh owns in five provinces: British Columbia, Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

The border-services agency announced Tuesday it is laying 37 charges against the two Montreal men under the Customs Act, the Food and Drugs

Act and the Criminal Code.

The most serious of the charges against the men, selling contraband, carries a maximum $500,000 penalty and up to five years in prison.

Authorities say the investigation was launched in 2011 when agents found 130,000 oral strips at Montreal's Trudeau airport. Then, a year later, it says it also found 120,000 pills and capsules, and packaging materials, at the head offices of Elmaleh's businesses.

Tiananmen remembered in Hong Kong

Vigil. Meanwhile, resentment of mainland China is rising

Every year, Hong Kong residents gather in droves for the annual vigil to commemorate the Tiananmen democracy protests. More than marking the brutal crackdown in Beijing 24 years ago, the event increasingly symbolizes disaffection with rule by China.

Tens of thousands of people gathered Tuesday evening at a large park in the former British colony. They turned the park into a sea of flickering light as they held candles to remember those killed when their protests in central Beijing were crushed by the Chinese military on June 4, 1989.

Commemorations of the crack-down are suppressed everywhere else in China.

The vigil was cut short by a brief but heavy tropical down-pour. But many remained, huddling with their candles under umbrellas. Organizers estimated a crowd of 150,000 while police put the number at 54,000.

Organizers called for Beijing to reverse its verdict on the protests, which Communist Party leaders have condemned as a counterrevolutionary riot.

Harassment. Mountie tries to launch class-action suit against RCMP

Lawyers for a female RCMP officer were in court Tuesday to try to sue the force on behalf of Mounties who say they've been harassed on the job.

The long process by officer Janet Merlo to have the lawsuit declared a class-action case and ultimately heard by a judge began last year.

Merlo alleges she and fellow female members across Canada were subject to discrimination, bullying and harassment

None of the allegations have been proven in court.

The RCMP has issued denials in several lawsuits against the force and its officers. But an internal report released last year suggests gender-based harassment was common among the officers who participated in a study about their experiences. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Turkey softens tone over protests

Fatality. 22-year-old man died during anti-government protest in Antakya city near border with Syria

Turkey's deputy prime minister offered an apology Tuesday for the government's violent crackdown on an environmental protest, a calculated bid to ease days of anti-government rallies in the country's major cities.

The message was a bit mixed, however, as hundreds of riot police deployed with water cannons around the prime minister's office in the capital of Ankara.

Bulent Arinc, who is standing in for the prime minister while he is out of the country, said the crackdown was "wrong and unjust."

Yet the impact of his statement was unclear. Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan,

Tens of thousands of mostly secular-minded Turks have joined anti-government

Pawsitive move. Furry refugees from Lebanon to call Canada home

A local non-profit is helping dogs from an overcrowded shelter in Beirut find welcoming families in Windsor.

For the Love of Paws, in partnership with Hopeful Hearts Dog Rescue in Ottawa and Beirut for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (BETA), is set to receive eight dogs from the Lebanese capital. "In our organization, we always felt that if there was a need somewhere, we would lend a hand," said John Dunn, a For the Love of Paws volunteer.

According to Dunn, the "unstable situation" in Lebanon takes its toll on animals as well as humans. Pets are abandoned as families move or are displaced, and many animals in BETA shelters have been victims of abuse.

"This is officially the worst period the animals have witnessed in the history of this organization," reads a December post on BETA's website. "As sad as it is, we see animals shot, burnt, dragged by cars and abused on daily basis ... but we have never seen so many animals being abandoned in so little time."

The dogs will be flown from Lebanon to Montreal on June 15, before being taken to Ottawa and picked up by volunteers the following day. Four of the eight dogs will be taken to Windsor, and after a brief stay in foster homes, they will be put up for adoption.

Canadians slow pace of debt accumulation

Personal finance. Data shows largest quarterly drop in non-mortgage debt since 2004

New data on consumer credit suggests Canadians are becoming more cautious about making purchases that involve taking on debt.

The analysis by TransUnion Market Trends shows average consumer debt in Canada, excluding mortgages, fell by two per cent to $26,935 in the first three months of 2013 from the fourth quarter in 2012.

While total debt is still 3.5 per cent higher from a year ago, it was the first quarterly drop since the third quarter of 2011 and the largest since the firm began collecting the data in 2004.

TransUnion vice president Thomas Higgins says while the fall-off was significant, it is still too early to declare a trend. He notes that the 2011 decline was quickly followed by rapid increases in 2012.

The Bank of Canada has welcomed the general trend to more frugal finances among households, particularly in mortgages, which make up for the vast majority of debt held by Canadians.

The bank continues to warn, however, that Canadians could be caught out once interest rates start rising.

With interest rates at rock-bottom levels, TransUnion says delinquency rates remain low for all credit products.

Average Canadian consumer debt, excluding mortgages, fell by two per cent in the first quarter of 2013 compared with the fourth quarter of 2012.

THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

On consumer debt — which includes credit card debt, lines of credit, instalment and car loans — all provinces except British Columbia posted a quarter-quarter decline in the first three months of 2013. In B.C., credit rose 3.7 per cent.

Exporter has hay day finding profits in B.C.'s excess crops

China's booming agricultural industry is literally proving to be rich fodder for farmers in Vanderhoof, B.C.

Entrepreneur Judd Wu moved from China last spring to launch Top Hay Agri Industries, specializing in compressing hay bales to a fraction of their original size, for shipment to China's voracious agricultural markets.

Wu chose Vanderhoof, which is in central B.C., because it has the acreage and climate to produce lots of hay, as well as convenient transportation links to port in Prince Rupert.

His first shipment was trucked out last week and Wu hopes to eventually increase daily production to 150 metric tonnes, feeding China's estimated annual demand of 100 million tonnes.

Vanderhoof, an area in central B.C., is capitalizing on China's agricultural boom by shipping excess hay overseas. GETTY IMAGES FILE Nechako-Lakes MLA John Rustad says Vanderhoof has the potential to grow much more hay than the region can consume.

He says shipping the excess overseas prevents low prices caused by a glut on local markets, offers a much-needed economic boost for the Nechako Valley, and strengthens Canada's bond with Chinese and other overseas markets.

DENY MILK FOR GREENER PASTURES

I'm so confused.

This week's hot book says that if you really want a meaningful relationship, you should go on a sex diet.

Well, to be precise, it says women should go on a sex diet, but that has obvious implications for their potential partners, who are everybody else.

The book is called The 30-Day Love Detox: Cleanse Yourself of Bad Boys, Cheaters, and Men Who Won't Commit — And Find a Real Relationship.

The author is Dr. Wendy Walsh, one of those friendly experts who populate the cable news channels. She even plays cable news experts on movies like Baywatch and The Cable Guy. I'm not sure how she went from a Ryerson journalism grad to "doctor," but it happened somewhere between Halifax, where she was born, and Los Angeles, where she was reborn on Fox and

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

CNN.

She does appear to have a PhD in psychology from the California Graduate Institute, which is not based on the back of a pack of matches, so we should listen.

The diet analogy goes beyond the title. It's all about "slow love." Like "slow food," get it? Citing "evolutionary psychology," Dr. Blond Alliteration promises to help women:

- Purge junk-food men
 - Learn the five sexual myths that keep women single
 - Determine when to begin the onset of sexual activity in a new relationship
 - Avoid the biggest mistakes women make when dating online
- Spot a commitment-oriented man at his "state of readiness," which is not, apparently, what you think it is.
- The secret: No sex for the first 30 days. As far as I can tell, she'd really like you to abstain until he puts a ring on it, but that's way too long for today's post-Sex and the City woman.

Dr. BA also says women should stop sexting during this same period of abstinence. It's the sexual equivalent of empty calories.

But! But! you're probably asking yourself: "How is this any different from the advice that mom used to dole out on a daily basis?" And, truth be known, still does. Well, it's scientific. During orgasm, the female body unleashes a tide of oxytocin, a hormone that encourages bonding. This is dangerous, according to Dr. Walsh, as a woman can think she's just hooking up when she's really bonding with some unsuitable, commitment-phobic, bad-boy creep who is just using her for sex.

So it's like mom (or dad, who knows all about commitment-phobic bad boys because he probably used to be one) with a PhD. Just goes to show the value of a good education. The moral of this story is that morality has nothing to do with it, but it's still the same old story: "Why would he buy the milk if he can get the, er, cow for free?"

Slow love rules. Even in the 21st century.

Paid to be unemployed: when actors get naked

The Internship.

Owen Wilson and Vince Vaughn use a familiar formula with their latest bumbling, stumbling comedy

The new buddy comedy The Internship pairs Owen Wilson and Vince Vaughn for the first time since 2005's Wedding Crashers.

They are still wild and crazy guys, but this time out they are unemployed wild and crazy guys pushed out of their jobs by technology.

Unable to get a foothold in the new media field they take intern jobs at Google.

"We're looking at some sort of mental Hunger Games against a bunch of genius kids for just a handful of jobs," says Wilson.

Many movies have used unemployment as the starting point for storytelling.

In Lost in America, rated one of Bravo's 100 Funniest Movies, Albert Brooks plays a successful advertising executive who gets fired for insulting his boss.

Free from the shackles of employment he goes all carpe diem and convinces his wife Linda (Julie Hagerty) to leave her job and explore the country in a Winnebago. When they lose their nest egg on a Las Vegas stop over they reenter the work force as a crossing guard and manager at a Der Wienerschnitzel restaurant, respectively.

As the movie ends they hit the road once again, hoping to reclaim their old jobs and lifestyles.

It would be hard to imagine a more toxic workplace than the real estate office in Glengarry Glen Ross.

Encouragement comes in the form of verbal abuse — most of which can't be printed in a family newspaper — and a motivational sales contest offering three prizes.

Owen Wilson
Talking about his new movie The Internship.

The top seller wins a Cadillac Eldorado.

"Second prize is a set of steak knives," says Blake (Alec Baldwin). "Third prize is you're fired."

Playwright David Mamet based the original play on his experiences working in a real estate office in the 1970s.

Finally, The Full Monty is a comedy that takes a serious look at the effects of unemployment on the individual and the community.

Set in Sheffield, England, it's the story of six men, most unemployed steel workers, who come up with a unique way to pay the bills.

They decide to form a Chippendale dancer style group, separating themselves from the pack by going "the full monty" and go completely stark naked.

While filming, the actors agreed to go completely nude in front of 400 extras provided they only had to do it once.

They got it in one take, and according to Roger Ebert, the inspiring and revealing final scene "was applauded at the screening I attended."

Barenaked Ladies rediscover their goofy side with Grinning Streak

Music. Band's previous album came amid a stormy time

The Barenaked Ladies' last album, 2010's All in Good Time, followed a dark period for the band and it showed: the usually light-hearted popsters swapped congenial hijinks for sombre self-reflection, which even extended to the album's starkly monochromatic cover.

Everything about their new album, Grinning Streak, indicates that the group has re-embraced the goofy, free-wheeling side it temporarily left behind following the departure of founding member Steven Page, even while retaining some of the maturity of their previous album.

"You could not ignore the events that happened (before All in Good Time)," drummer Tyler Stewart said in a recent interview at a Toronto diner, seated next to frontman Ed Robertson.

"It was our first time as a four piece. You couldn't ignore the fact that we needed to redefine ourselves. There's still some fun stuff on All in Good Time, but there's also some emotional stuff — dealing with a breakup essentially.

"So I'd say that the hopefulness is definitely back on this album."

Indeed, the new record — it hit stores Tuesday — features a number of breezy, feel-good tunes with a quirky streak. Odds Are finds Robertson gearing up almost to One Week speed for a cheerfully melodic tune about the general unlikelihood of various disasters, Smile is a sunny blast of acoustic guitar-driven nostalgia while Did I Say That Out Loud? is a snappy stomper with sweet lovelorn lyrics.

In fact, many of these tunes feature an upbeat perspective on love — one that's surprisingly up-front for the typically sly Robertson, who often wraps such sentiment in metaphor or irony. Robertson nods in acknowledgment when asked whether this record marks a more direct lyrical approach.

"I wasn't afraid to put my heart fairly firmly on my sleeve on this record," he said. "I think I've kind of made career out of being a little bit cagey and using a lot of metaphors and skulduggery."

"But I wanted to write some really sincere, direct songs on this record, and enjoyed doing that. It was an emotional process and a really rewarding one.... I wasn't afraid to write some things that were a little closer to home."

It seems, then, that Grinning Streak is perhaps a better indicator of the new-look Ladies than their previous record, which was issued right in the midst of several storms.

First, there was the departure of Page — said to be mutual — after the bespectacled singer with the impressive vocal range was involved in a high-profile cocaine bust (the charges were later dropped). Meanwhile, Robertson endured the death of his mother and was involved in a small plane crash outside Bancroft, Ont.

Grinning Streak still probes some of those wounds but from a different, more hopeful perspective than was possible three years ago.

Mayer exploring Perry's wonderland once again

It looks like on-again, off-again couple Katy Perry and John Mayer are very much on again, though this time it's a more "casual" relationship, according to E! News.

Though they haven't stepped out in public together since their March breakup, Perry and Mayer have reportedly been spending most of their nights together.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Radcliffe really wants to be a rad dad

Daniel Radcliffe wants to start a family, and he may be in somewhat of a hurry about it.

"I'd like to get started on it before my 30s," the 23-year-old Harry Potter star tells Time Out London. "I like the idea of being a youngish parent so I've got energy to play football, even though they'll be better than me by the time they're four."

And while he doesn't currently have a mom-to-be in mind, the height challenged Radcliffe admits she'll have to do a lot of the heaving lifting, height-wise.

"I will have to find a very tall wife if they're going to be good at sports," he says. "You could be my size as a boxer, you'd just have to be a super featherweight or something."

Al Pacino

Don't say Pacino never did anything for you, Bruce

If Al Pacino is to be believed, he could have been Han Solo. The Oscar winner says he nearly starred in some of the biggest franchise-starters in Hollywood history but decided to turn them down.

"Star Wars was mine for the taking, but I didn't understand the script," Pacino told an audience in London, according to the Evening Standard.

He also claims he turned down the lead role in Die Hard that eventually went to Bruce Willis. "I gave that boy a career," Pacino said.

Country of contrasts. This little nation with a famous canal boasts a bustling city, pristine beaches and verdant countryside

FERNANDO CARNEIRO

From modern skyscrapers in Panama City to the wild countryside and pristine beaches, Panama is a country of contrasts.

The Panama Canal, of course, brings people from all over the world to the capital, where international cuisine is easily found along with Caribbean flavours in restaurants such as Manolo Caracol and La Vitrola.

Its imposing skyline, dotted with ultra-modern architecture, is on display through the windows of downtown hotels like the Radisson Decapolis or the rooftop of the Hard Rock Hotel Panama Megapolis.

The nightlife includes a variety of charming restaurants in the Casco Viejo (old city) and salsa clubs featuring live bands such as the Havana Club Panama.

The local currency? They use U.S. dollars, except for the coinage, which is called the Balboa and minted in Canada.

Getting there

Nolitours offers flights through Air Transat to Panama City and various packaged vacations.

The world's greatest shortcut

It's impressive today and it must've blown people's minds 99 years ago when the first ship crossed the Panama Canal. Possibly the world's greatest shortcut — it takes ships an average of eight to 10 hours to transit the Canal versus nearly a month to go around South America — the Canal is also a must-see tourist attraction.

Its on-site museum has images and tools starting with the original French attempt at building the Canal, which was followed by the successful American completion of the crossing in 1914. Tens of thousands died during construction due to illnesses carried by mosquitoes and engineers were forced to innovate to dig through the continental divide.

Today, the Canal is one of the Seven Wonders of the Modern World and employs about 9,500 people, bringing in $1.5 billion to the Panamanian economy.

Although managed by the United States until 1999, the Canal is now nationally managed with an expansion on the way to handle larger ships. It's expected to be completed next year when the Canal turns 100. At the Miraflores lock, there's a buffet restaurant and viewing platform that allow tourists to see the ships enter the locks and watch them go through the various stages linking the ocean to Gatun Lake.

Trip tips

Hit the road this summer

ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

If the lure of the open road is calling you, just pick a stretch of highway somewhere between Trinity and Tofino. From coast to coast, Canada has limitless options when it comes to the makings of a great summer road trip.

Nova Scotia's Cabot Trail has always been a personal favourite. It offers stunning scenery, wildlife viewing (whales and moose) and the opportunity to touch the distinct Acadian and Scottish cultures that colour the history of the province. It is an ongoing debate whether to do the drive clockwise or counter-clockwise — I prefer clockwise. It builds your anticipation of the sites along the route in a more logical fashion.

Route 132 in Quebec's Gaspé region offers a scenic shore-hugging drive through silver-steepled villages surrounded by mountains and serenaded by the sea. The route forms a loop of about 900 kilometres. As the seaway widens into the gulf, try some ferry-hopping to explore both coasts of the St. Lawrence River.

The Trans Labrador Highway is a relatively new 1,054 kilometre frontier highway that allows you to explore the wilderness, culture and adventurous nature of Labrador. Make sure to visit the 16th century Basque whaling station turned National Historic Site in Red Bay. This section of the highway also offers numerous whale and iceberg viewing spots and the chance to visit the tallest lighthouse in Atlantic Canada.

For those who want to hit the pavement but don't want to do the actual driving go sidcar with Jasper Motorcycle Tours. They offer numerous touring packages of Alberta's stunning Icefields Parkway. You get up close and personal with not only the asphalt, but the scenery and the wildlife. On my tour we saw a brown bear, big horned sheep and more elk than I could count. The drivers are fully knowledgeable about the area so you enjoy a fully guided tour as you take in the sights.

If you prefer not having to suit up in leathers and a motorcycle helmet and are looking for something a little more fancy, consider Niagara Classic Cabs in Southern Ontario. They will customize your tour through the Niagara wine-growing region in high style. It's perfect for people who want to hit the wineries without worrying about who is going to be the designated driver.

Finders keepers in game for seekers

Geocaching craze. Try a treasure hunt next time you travel

Ever since there were pirates or wide-eyed children searching for eggs on Easter morning, treasure hunting has been a draw for the adventurous.

The adventure, of course, is in the hunt as much as it is in finding what has been hidden and meant to be found.

Combine that sense of adventure with global positioning technology and a desire to take advantage of the great outdoors, and you have a phenomenon known as geocaching — and tourism promoters are catching on, hoping to cash in.

Some tourism groups have watched the geocaching trend blossom over the past decade, and are taking advantage of it to attract treasure hunters and their treasure.

"There are a series of geocaches that have been set up in various locations with the express purpose of bringing people to that area," says John Robb, president of the Ontario Geocaching Association.

The Ottawa Valley Tourist Association, based in Pembroke, Ont., encourages visitors to pack their GPS units and head to Renfrew

County, northwest of Ottawa, a region that has become a popular geocaching destination with more than 300 cache sites scattered throughout the area.

Forgot your GPS, or don't have one? No problem. The association, like others, will loan one with a damage deposit.

It has become big business. "Anybody that does any level of geocaching will, at some point, travel to do geocaching," said Robb.

One of the largest annual geocaching events held in Canada is organized by the Central Ontario Geocachers. This year, hotels in and around Ontario's cottage country are expected to be inundated on June 15 by thousands of the sports enthusiasts for a hunt held at Geneva Park on the shore of Lake Couchiching, about 150 kilometres north of Toronto.

Presenting the power of communication

Skill of the speak.
The how-tos of delivering an effective and engaging presentation at work

SHAHEERAH KAYANI
TalentEgg.ca

From time to time, we are all faced with the challenge of delivering an effective presentation or communicating with others effectively to get our message across at work.

To deliver an effective presentation, it is important to first understand the communication model and the three components of communication.

The communication model begins with the sender (you). The sender encodes the message, the message goes through your chosen channel (such as a PowerPoint presentation), and the receiver (your audience) will then decode your message and respond with their feedback. There are also three very key elements that are the makeup of effective communication: 10 per cent content, 35 per cent vocal qualities, and 55 per cent body language and facial expressions.

Now that you understand the communication process, here are some tips on delivering an effective presentation:

Know your audience

It is very important to know your audience so that you can strategically relate your presentation topic and method of delivery to your audience. For example, if your audience is a panel of recruiters at a sales company (yes, an interview is probably one of your most important presentations!), you will need to dress professionally and present your work experiences and skills in a professional manner. But if your Early Childhood Education professor has given you the assignment of presenting to a group of preschoolers, then you will need to use age-appropriate terms and child-friendly activities. From my own personal experience as

Meeting mantra

Tell them what you are going to tell them, tell them, and tell them what you just told them.

Shaheerah Kayani
TalentEgg.ca

a business student, for example, Apple has been the most common presentation topic among my peers as we can all relate to the company and its products fairly easily.

Use visuals

Most of us are visual learners, and it can truly make your presentation so much better if you use visuals, such as images, diagrams, charts and videos, to support your presentation and message.

The classic presentation approach

Tell them what you are going to tell them, tell them, and tell them what you just told them.

This is the classic presentation approach that will help keep your presentation smooth and organized. Begin with an agenda, then the body of your presentation content, and finish off with a summary and conclusion.

TALENTEGG.CA IS CANADA'S LEADING JOB SITE AND ONLINE CAREER RESOURCE FOR COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY STUDENTS AND RECENT GRADUATES.

Practice makes perfect

Check with your school to see if they have a practice presentation room, or ask one of your professors or peers if you can rehearse in front of them.

- Remember, you don't want to monotonously read off your cue cards, but rather you should try to memorize the content and know it well enough so that you can present it.

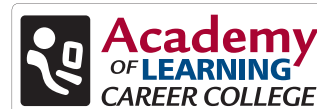

The amount of energy you demonstrate during your presentation will resonate with your audience, and keep them awake, listening and interested. And don't forget to smile. ISTOCK

Willis is all smiles with fresh start

CFL. Mayor of Swaggerville eager to terrorize quarterbacks as an Eskimo Odell Willis is the happiest man on the Edmonton Eskimos who can't control his rage.

He's the ever-smiling great teammate who has become a CFL vagabond due in part to self-centred behaviour.

In other words, the newest Eskimos rush end is a walking enigma — with 200 pairs of size-13 sneakers.

"Show me the mawnnnnnaaaay!!!" Willis — in his six-foot-two, 255-pound frame — shouts as he walks amongst his teammates in the Eskimo fieldhouse, a mile-wide grin on his face, mimicking wide receiver Rod Tidwell in the movie Jerry Maguire.

Eskimos camp is the fourth stop in five years for the 28-year-old import.

"Sports is one of the things you can get a clean slate at in life," said Willis. "So we're just ready to start clean, start fresh, new team, new look. Give this city something to smile about and be proud of."

It has been a long journey.

Quoted

"He loves to go to work and when he goes to work, he goes to work."

Eskimos head coach Kavis Reed, on Odell Willis.

He was born in 1984 in Meridian, Miss., two decades after the area became the nationally infamous dark heart of racial hatred for the murder of three civil rights workers.

He starred at the University of West Georgia, then went on to dominate arena football, prompting the Calgary Stampeders to give him an audition in 2009.

He played half the season for Calgary, then got traded to Winnipeg. His sack total was 10 that year.

The next two years in Winnipeg were the high point, when Willis became an out-sized, outspoken media darling, the self-styled "Mayor of Swaggerville."

He registered 11 sacks in 2010 and 13 in 2011 to earn CFL all-star recognition.

He made highlight reels for lightning-fast end runs, turning offensive tackles into turnstiles, followed by devastating hits to the quarterback.

But there were penalties, many penalties: Facemasking, roughing the passer, unnecessary roughness.

Midway through 2011 his indifference to defending the run relegated him to passing downs only. He was not pleased and during the Bombers' preparations for the Grey Cup tweeted he'd rather be at home eating Thanksgiving dinner.

The end came when he demanded the Bombers release him from his contract so he could try his luck in the NFL. Instead, they shipped him west to Regina.

The mayor means business

Odell Willis joined the Eskis three minutes after free agency began on Feb. 15, an obvious violation of rules prohibiting teams and free agents from negotiating beforehand.

- The Eskimos were fined $10,000 for tampering. The team paid up and wouldn't discuss it further.

- "The mayor (of Swaggerville) is here, but we're going to be more professional about ourselves this year, try to lead these young guys to a Cup," Willis said.

Despatie retiring from diving

Three-time world diving champion Alexandre Despatie is retiring after an illustrious career that saw him burst on to the international scene as a 13-year-old phenomenon.

Pistorius faces a life sentence in prison, with a minimum of 25 years, if convicted of premeditated murder, the charge against him for the shooting death of Reeva Steenkamp.

Defending champs pull it together at Staples Center

NHL playoffs. Kings extend home winning streak to 15 games and cut Blackhawks' series lead to 2-1

Slava Voynov had a goal and an assist, Jonathan Quick made 19 saves, and the Los Angeles Kings beat Chicago 3-1 in Game 3 of the Western Conference finals on Tuesday night, trimming the Blackhawks' series lead to 2-1.

Justin Williams also scored and Dwight King added an empty-net goal in the defending Stanley Cup champions' 15th consecutive home victory since March. The Kings have won eight straight home playoff games, dating to last season's title clincher, and they never trailed while ending the top-seeded Blackhawks' five-game post-season winning streak.

Game 4 is Thursday night. Bryan Bickell scored and Corey Crawford stopped 25 shots for the Blackhawks, who chased Quick from Game 2 and earned back-to-back home victories to open the series last weekend.

The Kings had lost five of their previous seven playoff games before getting back to the friendly Staples Center and their sellout crowd. Quick also returned to Conn Smythe Trophy form in Game 3, highlighted by a dazzling late save on Bickell, while his low-scoring teammates generated just enough offence to hold off the Blackhawks, who hadn't lost since Game 4 of the second round. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gibbons would 'be surprised' if Cabrera gets another PED suspension

Baseball is on the verge of the biggest drug scandal in North American sports history, but there is no indication Blue Jays outfielder Melky Cabrera will be involved in an expected onslaught of PED suspensions by MLB's front office.

Cabrera and the Jays were on the field in San Francisco when ESPN broke a story claiming a "biogenics" doctor in Miami had struck a deal with baseball to "name names" of players to whom he provided banned substances.

The report says baseball will seek suspensions for up to 20 players — and that bans as long as 100 games will be sought for superstars Alex Rodriguez and Ryan Braun.

Cabrera served a 50-game drug suspension last season while with San Francisco and has said he has been co-operating with baseball in its investigation into the use of banned substances by major league players.

The ESPN report, citing unnamed sources, says baseball's investigation centres on the Miami Biogenesis clinic operated by Tony Bosch.

"I know he (co-operated) and that was tied into the investigation," Jays manager John Gibbons said.

"I'd be surprised (by further suspensions for Cabrera) because he's served one already."

Cabrera, through a Jays spokesman, said he had no comment in the wake of the ESPN report.

Both Rodriguez and Braun have denied ties to Bosch, but Cabrera, when he reported to spring training, issued a statement saying he was co-operating with baseball in its investigation.

Review. Yet another global small car finds a home in North America

wheelbasemedia.com

It's lean times these days for Mitsubishi fans. With only a variety of Lancer and Outlander models plus the iMiEV electric car on showroom floors, product diversity is definitely lacking. Fortunately, some relief is at hand in the form of the 2014 Mirage sub-compact.

In the distant past, various Mirages were imported to North America wearing Mitsubishi, Dodge and Plymouth labels (Chrysler and Mitsubishi once worked closely together). That well dried up after the 2002 model year, but it will be at least partially replenished this fall by a small four-door hatchback that the automaker promises will be one of the most fuel-efficient non-hybrids you can buy. The new five-passenger Mirage hatchback, currently manufactured in Thailand for Mitsubishi's European and Asian markets, is due here this fall.

A quick walk-around confirms that the vehicle's diminutive appearance is no, uh, mirage. The little zipper is perched low to the ground on tiny 14-inch wheels that would seem right at home on a Smart ForTwo. The rounded and somewhat stubby front gives the car a cute-in-its-own-way appearance that belies its wind-cheating drag coefficient. Although the front doors and liftgate are generously sized, smallish rear doors and a sloping roofline hamper three-in-a-pinch rear-seat access.

The interior appointments are simple, yet tasteful, with

2014 Mitsubishi Mirage

- Engines (hp). 1.2-litre DOHC three-cylinder (74hp)
- Transmissions. Five-speed manual; continuously variable (CVT)

Fuel Economy

Contemplating a vehicle this small usually involves compromises and in the Mirage's case you give up room in return for exemplary fuel economy. Mitsubishi is estimating 5.3 l/100 km in the city and 4.4 in the highway. That beats the Chevy Spark's 6.3/5.1 rating and even surpasses the Smart Fortwo's 5.8/4.7.

Design

The car is larger than the Chevrolet Spark, for example, in most key exterior measurements by five to 7.5 centimetres. However, it's more petite than other competitors, notably the Ford Fiesta, Honda Fit and Hyundai Accent hatches.

easy-to-read gauges and controls that gibe with the Mirage's practical nature. The 60:40 split rear seat can be folded down for added stowage but even when occupied there's reasonable space for groceries and gear.

The base model actually comes with a decent list of features, such as tilt steering, keyless entry, power windows and outside mirrors, a 140-watt four-speaker audio system and an eco indicator that lights up when you're operating in a fuel-saving manner. The Mirage also has seven standard airbags, including a driver's knee inflatable.

Move up to the premium model and the content list is expected to include automatic climate and speed control, alloy wheels, steering-wheel-mounted audio switches, fog lamps and keyless entry and a start/stop button. The Mirage will never be confused for a junior-sized luxury car — leather seats, sunroof and other niceties aren't offered — but as a short-haul urban commuter it's the right car for the job.

Keep it steady

If you own a motorcycle, you've likely had occasion to transport it by trailer or in the bed of a pickup. In any event, you were likely concerned about the bike somehow tipping over. To move your ride safely and securely, consider the Motorcycle Wheel Chock that's a new product from Steadymate. The Wheel Chock can be securely bolted to the floor using the hardware that's included. Or, you can set it up in your garage by attaching the rubber feet (also included). Fits wheel sizes from 12 to 26 inches in diameter. The Wheel Chock sells for $229 and can be ordered from the Toronto-based company at steady-mate.com.

Clean cleaning cloths

There are plenty of specially developed cloths, towels and mitts on the market for washing, wiping and waxing the exterior and interior of your vehicle. But how do you restore them to a useful condition after you've dirtied them up a bit? The maker of WHOOSH! claims that its biodegradable detergent will not harm the micro-fibres that are commonly used to manufacture cleaning cloths and applicators. Instead, they will turn out as soft and fluffy as new, which is what you need to get back to work on your vehicle. A 32-ounce (946 ml) bottle sells for $20 US and is available from the manufacturer at whooshinc.com.

Flip your Jeep lid

Talk to any owner about their Jeep Wrangler and they'll wax poetic about their favourite off-roader. But ask them about removing and reinstalling the Jeep's canvas top and the conversation might get uncomfortable. In short, it's not much fun wrestling with the various snaps, zippers, hooks and other attachments. A solution is in hand in the form of the power-operated MyTop from Roadwire. The company states that its lid will automatically fold back and reverse itself in about six seconds and the folding/re-folding process are of the same design used to operate the canopies of fighter jets.

MyTop is priced at $4,700 US, plus installation. More info is available at roadwire.com.

An illuminated belt

When traveling at night, it's difficult for front or rear-seat passengers to read a book, play a game or fiddle with their personal audio devices without flipping on a glare-creating dome lamp. That won't present a problem if they use the SpotGlo light from Autolite. This fully adjustable cellphone-sized light-emitting-diode (LED) illumination source clips onto the user's seatbelt without causing any annoying and potentially distracting-for-the-driver glare. The SpotGlo is powered using three AAA batteries (not included) and will reportedly last for a minimum of 10 hours on the high setting, or 25 when set to low. One costs $10 US, visit autobarn.net.

Car colour: there's protection in that paint

Driving force. Several different layers laid on and cured on the factory floor are all part of the long term battle against corrosion

drive@metronews.ca

You might think your vehicle's paint is all about it looking good, but it's just half the story.

That paint job actually involves a multi-stage process that's as much about protecting the metal from corrosion as it is about appearance.

The first step starts before the car is even built. "The steel comes in as a coil with a zinc layer that's applied at the mill," says Tim Weingartz, paint materials and strategy manager for Ford Motor Company.

"The zinc is the first layer for corrosion protection."

The steel is made into a vehicle body, which is then dipped into two different tanks, each containing more than 60,000 litres of corrosion-resistant coating materials.

The body is then baked at 180 degrees Celsius to cure the coatings. These, plus that first zinc coating, provide three initial layers of protection against rust.

The first paint step is primer. It protects the top anti-corrosion layer from sunlight, which can make it

Cleaner process

"We now have one bake for all three layers, which lowers the carbon footprint by anywhere from 15 to 25 per cent and the energy saving is very significant."

Tim Weingartz, paint materials and strategy manager for Ford Motor Company
On how the latest painting technology is easier on the environment go chalky, and it provides a smooth base for the paint.

Since it's a relatively elastic coating, it also absorbs the energy when debris hits it, helping to prevent stone chips.

"After that, we put on the layer that everyone thinks of as the paint," Weingartz says.

"It's typically a base coat which contains the colour and pigment. Over top of that, we apply clear coat. It's a superior barrier and it gives the car that depth of appearance that adds to the esthetics of the vehicle."

Some colour coats contain tiny flakes of aluminum or mica. Known as "metallic" paints, these give the finish an extra glimmer. All of the primer, paint, and clear coat layers together are about as thick as a human hair.

Once the final clear coat layer is applied, the vehicle is baked again to cure the paint.

"We used to bake the primer separately, and then the base coat and clear coat," Weingartz says. "We now have one bake for all three layers, which lowers the CO2 footprint by anywhere from 15 to 25 per cent, and the energy saving is very significant. The lean process has elevated us environmentally, and it's a cost savings, too."

Take note

- Extra $. Some car colours are extra-charge because some pigments, notably red, are costlier to manufacture. Metal flake can also drive up the paint's price.
- Energy sapping. Painting requires a lot of power, and can account for more than half of an auto plant's energy consumption.
- Creative. Auto colour designers work with many influences, including fashion design, to develop new paint shades for vehicles

Billionaire Musk says Supercharge me

Autopilot. Versatile multi-tasker behind Tesla to build risky North America-wide charging network

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Tesla is not waiting. You other electric car companies and various government jurisdictions can just keep combing your hair and looking for your wallet and house keys. Tesla is heading out the door. That's the gist of Tesla's announcement last week about its intent to build a continent-wide network of charging stations, all by its lonesome.

Supercharging

The network will utilize the new Tesla "Supercharger," currently in beta testing and scheduled to roll out to customers this summer. The technology will allow the Tesla Model S to be charged at 120 kW,

Quoted

Elon is CEO and product architect of Tesla Motors. replenishing three hours of driving in about 20 to 30 minutes — just enough time for a double-double and a bodily-function break. You're then free and able to drive off to another city, and another supercharger station, and to repeat that process as many times as you would like. In a statement, Tesla said the Supercharger network will enable Tesla owners "to travel long distances, for free, indefinitely." Yes, free fuel. But indefinitely? I don't think that can actually work, unless you're one of those teenage vampires.

The Network

Currently Tesla already has a network that services California and Nevada on the west coast, and the Washington, DC to Boston region on the east coast. By next month, the number of stations will triple to cover more regions, including the northwest (Vancouver to Seattle to Portland). Within six months the network will purportedly connect "most of the major metro areas in the U.S. and Canada," including Ottawa to Montreal. Apparently, it will then be possible to travel diagonally across the U.S. from Los Angeles to New York using only the Tesla Supercharger network. And within a year, the network will, according to the statement, "stretch across the continent, covering almost the entire population of the U.S. and Canada."

The futuristic charger will soon eclipse the gas pump.

The man behind Tesla

The Tesla charging network is just one more bold move by Elon Musk, the enigmatic co-founder, CEO and Product Architect of Tesla Motors. Other things on the billionaire's resume: co-founder of PayPal; co-creator and principle shareholder of SolarCity, the leading provider of solar power systems in the U.S.; chief designer at SpaceX, which does a lot of things in space with rockets, like shuttling cargo back and forth from the International Space Station. Sometimes one strong, determined and capable person taking a calculated risk is the only way big things can get done. Otherwise it's a quagmire of committees, special interest groups and over thinking. But while I admire Elon Musk, I'm not sure I like him. He's making the rest of us look bad. Especially those of us who struggle with decisions. Do I have trouble making decisions? Well, yes and no.

Make your move.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

You may prefer to hide than to deal with people who annoy you today. But that would be a shame because the planets indicate you have much to share, and much to gain from expressing your point of view.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Someone you live or work with will test your willingness to stand up for what you believe over the next 24 hours. They don't know you as well as they should. A Taurus never gives in!

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

You may be big and tough enough to face a worrying situation alone by there is no reason why you should. Call on friends and colleagues to back you up today.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

A loved one is eager to kiss and make up and, deep down, so are you. Get over your hurt feelings and get back together. And remember: Everyone falls out occasionally.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

According to the planets, affairs of the heart need extra attention today, as do friendships that seem to be drifting apart. The upcoming new moon can heal any rift. But first that has to be your desire.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Most people respond well to reason but one person is behaving so badly that you may have no choice but to lay down the law. No one plays hardball better than a Virgo.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

If someone offers you advice today, you would be wise to listen and, if possible, take action. The last thing they want is to see you make a silly and costly mistake — and you don't want to see it either.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

An opportunity to improve your status at work looks tempting but the planets warn it will mean a lot of extra responsibility and you already have too much on your plate.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Your plans for the day should be based on what interests you, not on what other people expect of you. If you let them tell you what to do once, they will do it again and again.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You may be doing well but you are also worried that the more you gain, the more likely it is someone will come along and take it away from you. That's far too negative an attitude — and far too materialistic.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Routine tasks will come easy to you today and you will feel immensely pleased with yourself when it's all done. You will also be entitled to take it easy this evening, maybe in the company of a special friend.

Pisces

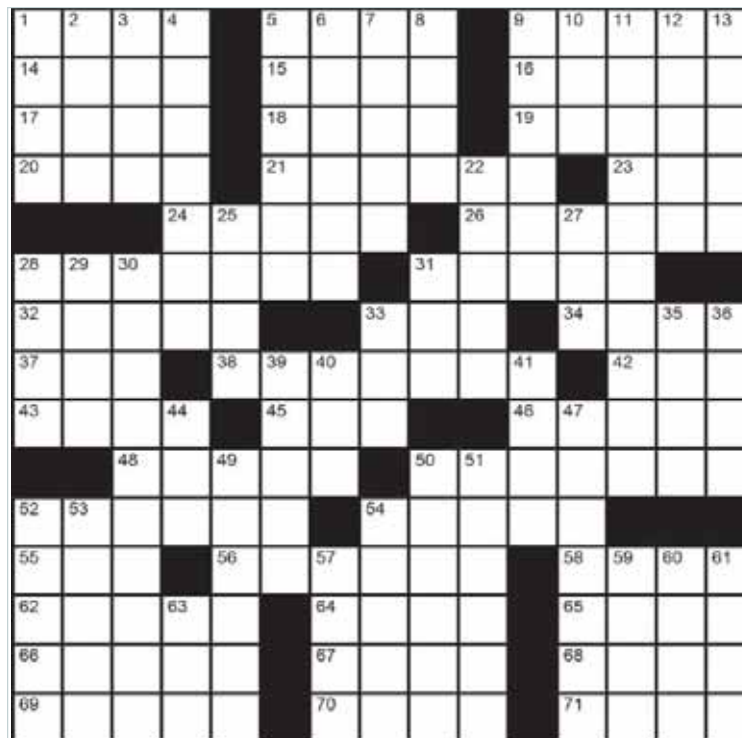

Feb. 20 - March 20

If you have something to say, you must speak up. According to your solar chart, a frank exchange of views is not just an option but a must. Without it, confusion and bad feelings will continue. SALLY BROMPTON
